DIALOGUE

Hello, and welcome to Kim's Kitchen.

Today, I'm going to show you a simple recipe¹ for cookies.

Let's² start with the ingredients. You will need three cups of flour, one and a half teaspoons³ of baking powder, eight ounces of butter, one and a half cups of sugar, and one egg.

First⁴, mix the flour and baking powder in a bowl.

Then⁴, in another bowl, mix the sugar and butter. Next⁴, add the egg, and blend in the mixture from the first bowl.

Finally⁴, use a wooden spoon to put balls of the cookie dough⁵ onto a baking tray, and bake⁶ in the oven for ten minutes.

Allow the cookies to cool for a few minutes — but don't eat them all at once!

LISTENING COMPREHENSION

It has been said⁷ that England and America are two countries divided by a common language⁸, and much has been written⁹ about words that are chiefly¹⁰ used in one country or the other (for instance¹¹, eggplant in the US and aubergine in the UK). However, there are also words that exist in both¹² countries but have a different meaning depending on which side of the Atlantic¹³ you are on.

The word 'cookie' is a good example. In the UK, a cookie is a soft, moist¹⁴ biscuit. British cookies tend to be bigger and more substantial than a British biscuit. In the US, however, the word 'cookie' covers both what the British would call a biscuit and a cookie.

The word cookie comes from the Dutch¹⁵ koekje, meaning 'little cake', and could have been popularized in the US due to¹⁶ early Dutch colonization, though¹⁷ we don't know for sure.

Cookies are made in a wide variety of styles, using a range of ingredients including sugars, spices, chocolate, butter, peanut butter, nuts, or dried fruits. Some cookies are soft and others hard. The softness of the cookie depends on 18 how long 19 it is baked.

Now, what sort of cookie would you like with your tea²⁰?

QUESTIONS

- How well can you cook?
- What things can you cook?
- Where do you find your recipes?
- What is your favorite recipe?
- What's your opinion of TV cookery programmes?

LANGUAGE NOTES

- 1. Recipe is pronounced 'ressipy' (/'resəpi/ in phonetic transcription).
- 2. Let's is the short form of 'let us', the first person plural imperative. We only use 'let us' in very formal situations: Let us pray. However, we often use 'let's' to make suggestions which include ourselves: Let's go to the cinema tonight.
- 3. A teaspoon is a small spoon used for eating, for adding sugar to tea or coffee, or, when cooking, for adding small amounts of a liquid or powder. A teaspoon (or teaspoonful) is also the amount of food or liquid that a teaspoon holds: Add one teaspoon(ful) of sugar to the mixture.
- 4. First, Then, Next, and Finally are examples of sequencing words. They are used to show the order in which something is done.
- 5. Dough rhymes with 'go'. The letter combination 'ough' can be pronounced in at least eight different ways in English!
- 6. You bake bread and cakes but you roast meat in the oven.
- 7. It has been said is an Impersonal Passive. In English, the Impersonal Passive is commonly used with verbs of perception (e.g., say, think, know). Example: They say that women live longer than men. \Rightarrow It is said that women live longer than men.
- 8. This famous remark is generally attributed to the Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw, though it is not found in any of his published works.
- 9. Much has been written is a passive sentence ('written' is the past participle of the irregular verb 'to write'). The active equivalent would be 'People have written a lot of things ...'. How many other passives can you find in the text?
- 10. Chiefly is a synonym for 'mainly' or 'mostly'.
- 11. For instance means the same as 'for example'.
- 12. Note that we say both and never 'the both': Which one do you prefer? I like both.
- 13. Britain and America are separated by the Atlantic Ocean.
- 14. Moist means 'slightly wet'. It is often used to describe cakes: The moist texture of cakes comes from the ingredients used, the method of preparation, and the baking time and temperature.
- 15. Dutch is the adjective for the Netherlands, also known as Holland. Do not use it to describe things or people from Germany, which are German!
- 16. Due to means the same as 'as a result of or 'because of': The game was postponed due to the weather.
- 17. The conjunction though rhymes with 'go', and means the same as 'although' (= even if).
- 18. Note that we say 'depends on' (not 'of').
- 19. How long here refers to the length of time. It can also refer to size: How long is your swimming pool?
- 20. Tea can be a drink or a meal. Here it's the drink.
